

WINTER 2004 · HONORS 135.006

STUDENT ACTIVISM

AND

SOCIAL CHANGE

AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

For over 70 years, students and faculty at the University of Michigan have organized rallies, strikes, teach-ins and protests. From the pacifist movement in the 1930s, civil rights and Vietnam in the 1960s, the Black Action Movement in the 1970s to activism today, Michigan has been at the forefront of student activism in the U.S. Honors 135.006 will critically examine this history in the context of American history.

This is a 1-credit mini-course for first year honors students, it will meet Mondays 4-5 PM, the weeks of Jan. 12 to Mar. 8, location TBA.
